

Going Digital | Color Analysis

With the world moving to a more digital arena, accessing color information shouldn't be any different. That's why we decided to shift toward the more eco-friendly side of things. Starting with Spring/Summer 22, Color Analysis will only be offered in a digital format. You will now have all the great content you love, right at your fingertips. Along with easy access, the new lower price will also fit into any size budget.

So simple, that with just the click of a button, you will have all the same great content at your fingertips, without having to take up desk space.

The Color Solutions International (CSI) trend forecasting report provides color information for color managers, directors and designers to support the color palette development process. Colorful, informative and inspirational, this semi-annual trend report is essential for informed seasonal color decisions.

Also, in this report, the CSI team expanded the use of their proprietary Relative Color Popularity report (RCP). RCP is a marriage of color validation with trend color forecasting. CSI customers are raving about how helpful this data-driven information has been in their design process!

With 20 years of color development experience, season after season, designers and color managers have come to rely on the data and trend expertise provided by the Color Solutions International color and trend team.

To find out more, and purchase yours today, please visit us @ csicolors.com/color-analysis.